Father knows best

Atlanta artist HORMUZ MININA has always raised the bar with compelling work that examines provocative issues ranging from American consumer culture to his divided Indian/American identity. His upcoming installation at Castleberry Hills' Garage Projects APRIL 14-16 explores his recent fatherhood and the attendant anxiety about the future that it entails. An engineer by trade, Minina's installations are technically complicated affairs and this most recent combination of video, sound and sculpture promises to be no exception. Free. Opening reception: Thurs., 7-10 p.m.; Regular viewing: Fri.-Sat., 11 a.m.-6 p.m. 261 Peters St. www.garageprojects.com.

ROAD TRIP

It's beer time

The smartest thing Plato ever said was this: "He was a wise man who invented beer." On APRIL 16, the wisest among us are flocking to Athens for the CLASSIC CITY BREW FEST. Now in its 10th year, the Brew Fest features more than 200 beers from around the world, all under one roof. Laws in Georgia now allow for higher gravity beers, so get a designated driver or at least a hotel room. Tickets for unlimited beer samples are $25 at the door, but be warned that only 2,500 are available, so we recommend buying tickets in advance for $21.50. 3-7 p.m. The Classic Center, 300 N. Thomas St., Athens. 706-357-4444. www.brewfest.net.
